erday concluded its annual meeting which has been in progress at the Na-tional Museum for several days. The vork transacted during the session has een highly satisfactory to the member of the Academy. At the business session yesterday morning there were five scientists elected to membership in the academy. my. They are E. H. Moore, professor of nathematics, University of Chicago; Ed ward II. Nichols, professor of physic Cornell University; George F. Becker, of the United States Geological Survey, Washington; James McK. Cattell, professor of psychology, Columbia University, New York, and T. Mitchell Pruden professor of biology, Columbia University, New York.

An election was also held to select ome secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the election on Wednesday of Ira sen to the position of foreign secre tary, which was formerly held by Prof. Agassiz, the present President of the Academy. Arnold Hague, of the United States Geological Survey, was elected home secretary.

Five is the largest number of persons who can be elected to membership in the Academy at an annual meeting. The elec-tion of members to the Academy is conneted behind closed doors. No one no be present during the discussion of the ominees for membership. The only member from Washingto lected to membership at this session o the Academy was Dr. George F. Becker, of the Geological Survey.

Several changes in the constitution have seen proposed and were referred to the souncil, which consists of the officers of the Academy and six additional mem-bers. The report of the council will be upmitted to the Academy at the next The session yesterday afternoon was de-

In ad-dition to the eminent scientists who claim membership in the Academy, there were present many prominent Government offi-cials. Covers were laid for eighty-one persons. The table was arranged in the hape of a horseshoe. Prof. Simon New-comb, United States Navy, presided. At his right sat Secretary Gage and Prof. Asaph Hall, of Harvard University, the Vice President of the Academy. On his left were seated Secretary Wilson and left were seated Secretary Wilson and Prof. Alexander Agassiz, of Cambridge, Mass., the newly-elected President of the Academy. There was no set programme of speeches, but at the conclusion of the repast Prof. Newcomb called upon several of the guests for impromptu speeches. Secretary Wilson, in responding, spoke of the scientific features of the work of the Department of Agriculture, in importing seeds, grasses, and plants from foreign countries. He said the salaries paid the acientists in Government employ were two small. This was the reason he asserted why the young scientists who every year graduate from the colleges and universities of the land go into other lines of investigation than those conducted by the Government. They are offered better inducements to associate themselves with colleges and private corporations than with the Government. This condition of affairs was one which Secretary Wilson deemed a hindrance to more rapid progress.

In regard to the sale of the old desks which have been removed from the House of Representatives Clerk McDowell has had quite a nice point to decide. He has been called upon to construe the resolution under which the sale of the furni ture was authorized, which seems not to have been specific enough in its terms. It states only that the "desks" are to be It states only that the "desks" are to be sold, and the question arose, what was the Clerk to do with some 150-odd chairs, seatless, broken-backed, and without rollers in many cases, without any authority to dispose of them. After some deliberation Mr. McDowell decided that as a desk is useless without a chair, and as a chair is no good without a desk, and further that it took both of them to make a Representative comfortable, and still further that one was never known to go without the other, it was mete, proper without the other, it was mete, proper, and lawful that he should also sell, transfer, and deliver into the keeping of whomsoever bought a desk the chair which accompanied it when it was in position in the House.

If the present demand by members and ex-members for desks, which they used in Congress continues there will be none left for the general public. The Clerk has now on hand the orders of about 250 members to reserve their desks, and they are still coming in at the rate of about three a day. It will be possible for a bidder at the auction sale of the seats which will take place in a month or two to make things uncomfortable for all the Congressional purchasers. The law says that the Representatives shall be allowed to buy their desks at the average price brought at the auction. A few desks bought at $206 apiece because of their association with prominent men, will cause a little trouble by raising the average to a high figure.
